This one was deceptive, I really thought it would be easier. Went through a few different ideas and settled on box shadows cause IÂ ... I had to go with the solution that I knew could be done quickly rather than explore what is probably shortest. I do try to explain howÂ ... I don't think the solution was good but there might be something to work with. I used the html to make the background with someÂ ... I was hoping the dimensions would line up for the stripes on the balls to touch each other but it did not seem to. I did an elaborateÂ ... I did box shadows and not that well. It was a long road but got there in the end even with the odd values. Final character count: 111. No good ideas for today. I did a couple conic gradients but didn't see an easy way to combine it into one. Didn't reduce so left it at 100%. I went for gradients and that was a mistake. Didn't even get to 100% and spent waaaaay too long messing with this flawed solution. This is an interesting one. I ended up using outline and border to get this done and then realized corner shape might work well. Just a border and background for this one with the body rotated. Final character count: 111.
