Another crucial use of the corner shape to resolve these rowdy rectangles, rigidly resisting rearrangement. This one has bits from yesterdays Once you realize there are really only two different shapes here, this This one was as straightforward as it gets, just some simplistic sliders slightly separated sneakily swapping sides. This one is frustrating. Seeing is not always believing. I got the peaks and valleys to a 100% match after a misleading gooseÂ ... This one definitely exposed my lack of knowledge around variables with fallbacks. Regardless beat the average score and hit thatÂ ... I tried to be smart and solve this one "elegantly" . What a fail.

Still hit the 100% match, not the way I envisioned. This one actually seems harder than it is when you understand how the conic gradients center positioning works. Glad I spentÂ ... Sneaky mods ever so slightly shifted the right stripes to make this a tad harder. I love it. Got that 100% and beat the average score! This little spooky monster was just a combination of familiar gradients all positioned properly, perfectly painting pacman's predatorÂ ... The little afro-robot seemed to be a tad more complex than initially thought. For me its the combination of the box-shadows thatÂ ... This decorative bench was the perfect combination of gradients.
